DEPORTATIONS THE SUBJECT OF LIVELY CABINET DEBATE

President Inquired as to Radical Activity Behind Labor Troubles and Asked for Investigation.

WOULD BE JUST, BUT RELENTLESS

Views of Palmer and of Secretary Wilson on Proceedings Against Aliens Vigorously Discussed.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—President Wilson has asked both the Department of Justice and the Department of Labor to inquire closely into the relationship between so-called "radicals and communists" and the industrial disturbances which have been cropping out of late throughout the country.

The President gave the impression to his Cabinet that while the Government should proceed relentlessly against disturbers of industrial peace and deport aliens found guilty thereof, he wanted the judicial process to be painstakingly fair.

Mr. Wilson's first Cabinet meeting in nearly eight months was extraordinarily interesting. The President sat behind a mahogany desk in the upper apartments of the White House. It is a room used by him as a study. There is a tablet on the wall which recalls that President Lincoln held his Civil War sessions with the Cabinet in the same room. Mr. Wilson sat with his back to the light, which streamed in from the south portico. Members of the Cabinet shook hands with him as he sat at his desk. To each he had a pleasant word of greeting. The members of the Cabinet were brought from adjoining rooms and as the room is rather spacious, the Cabinet members moved up close to the desk in semi-circular array. Nobody smoked.

The President opened the meeting with a brief statement of the apparently critical situation in which the country had been plunged by the strike of railway employees and said he wanted the benefit of the counsel and advice of the Cabinet.

Palmer Analyzes Situation.
Attorney-General Palmer, who had brought a portfolio of papers to the meeting, immediately responded with an analysis of the underlying currents of mischief-making which had been injected into industrial relations by the I. W. W., radicals, communists and other malcontents. He said that wherever a strike existed or was threatened the disturbing elements promptly availed themselves of the opportunity to stir up more trouble. He told of the policy which his department had pursued in investigating aliens and bringing the cases to the attention of the Department of Labor for deportation.

A rather pointed colloquy occurred on the subject of the law involved in deportations and President Wilson asked many questions. When the Attorney-General had concluded, the President turned to Secretary William B. Wilson and asked for the viewpoint of the Department of Labor, which is charged entirely with the enforcement of the deportation laws. There had been during the discussion a plain intimation that the Department of Justice was not of the same opinion as the Department of Labor in handling deportation cases.

Difference in Views on Deportation.
This fundamental difference has long been known and involves really an attitude of mind. The Department of Justice views the radicals as persons of whom a criminal should be made. It contends that the procedure with reference to deportation is purely administrative and not criminal and that all the Department of Labor needs to do is to be satisfied by the Department of Justice's investigation that a man comes within the meaning of the deportation laws and he should be deported. On the other hand the Department of Labor insists that while the procedure may be administrative, it is as serious as a criminal matter, for it deprives a man of his home and contact with his family and possessions and drives him out of the country. Such an action should not be taken in the view of the Department of Labor without being absolutely sure of the facts.

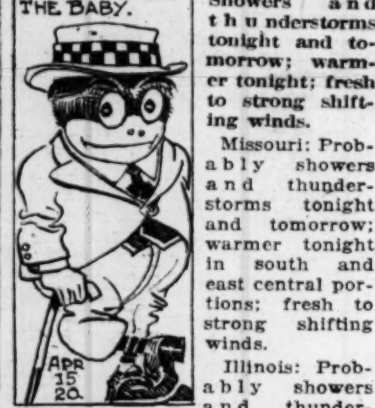

Therefore this department urges that every defendant be given an opportunity to be represented by counsel and witnesses who can refute the testimony of the Government agents who make the complaint.

The debate in the Cabinet more-over developed another vital point.

Joseph Arnold, 25 years old, of 5129 Emily avenue, a carpenter foreman, was injured in an unusual accident yesterday when a hoist rope caught around his ankles and threw him from the roof of a four-story building at Löffingwell avenue and Locust street. The rope held to his ankle but became taut after he had fallen 30 feet and he swung back and forth head downward, striking the wall of the building several times before other workmen could check the swing.

WINS $1000 IN LOTTERY; TOLD IT IS MISTAKE

Antone Thoman Could Not Get Cash When He Presented Ticket With Winning Number.

ANOTHER LEAVES
CITY WITH MONEY

Former Department Store Detective, Among Three Arrested, Says Error Was Made in Numbering.

Antone Thoman of 4300 Clayton avenue, a newspaper carrier, who believed that he held a ticket winning the $1000 grand prize of the "Ydona lottery," based upon the four final figures of the St. Louis Clearing House Association's report last Saturday, was told, when he presented his ticket for collection, that his ticket was the result of a printing mistake in numbering and that another man had claimed the $1000.

The police yesterday arrested Joseph Lehn, 40 years old, who conducts a barber shop at 2857 Cherokee street, who is said to have sold the ticket that came into Thoman's possession, and Antone F. Luning, 27 years old, 3433 South Compton avenue, a drug salesman, and Walter X. Kelleher, 38, 3109 Cherokee street, formerly a detective in a downtown department store, as proprietors of the lottery.

Luning and Kelleher said, the police assert, that they had made a mistake in printing the numbers and that the money had been paid to John Brown, who conducts a shoe shining parlor in the department store which Kelleher had been employed. Brown said that he had resold the winning ticket which he originally held to a bootblack employed by him and had collected the prize for him.

JACKSON, Miss., April 15.—E. R. Franklin, a negro, said to represent "The Crisis," a New York publication, has been sentenced in Holmead County, this state, to six months' imprisonment, and $400 fine, according to advices here last night. The case arose out of an editorial in the January issue of the paper.

RELIEF OF SUGAR SHORTAGE IS PREDICTED BY OCTOBER

Denver Chemist Estimates Beet Crop This Year in U. S. Will Total 750,000 Tons.

The beet sugar crop, which will be marketed in October, can be expected to alleviate the present sugar shortage, according to Dr. J. S. Osborn of Denver, chief chemist of the Western Sugar Co., who today read a paper before the sugar division of the American Chemical Society at Hotel St. Louis.

Dr. Osborn said that the beet sugar production in the United States in 1916, which was the year previous to this country's entrance to the war, was 750,000 tons and that the coming crop likely would exceed that tonnage or at least equal it.

BRITISH MINERS ACCEPT WAGE

Twenty Per Cent Increase Favored by 65,135 Majority.

LOXNDON, April 15.—The members of the Miners' Federation in Great Britain, by a majority of 65,135 votes, has decided to accept the Government's offer of a 20 per cent increase on gross earnings.

The Government's offer provides for a minimum flat advance of about 50 cents for all workers over 18 years of age, 25 cents for workers between 16 and 18 years and nine pence (18 cents) for workers under 16.

Tax Payments, $17,737,920.

Income tax payments for the first quarter in St. Louis were $17,737,920, according to a compilation completed today in the Internal Revenue Collector's office. Last year's first quarterly payment was about $11,000,000. Total income tax payments last year were $46,707,032.16 and it has been estimated that this year's total will be more than $65,000,000.

U. R. CONDUCTOR GETS ONE YEAR FOR STEALING FARES

Harry J. Julin Convicted of Taking $97.78, but Circuit Attorney Says Verdict Is Contrary to Law.

JUDGE ACCEPTS IT,
DISCHARGES JURY

Least Sentence Possible in Felony Cases Two Years in Penitentiary, McDaniel Asserts.

Harry J. Julin of 331A Fassen street, a conductor on the Broadway line, was found guilty by a jury today and sentenced to one year imprisonment on a charge of embezzling from the receiver of the United Railways Co. street car fares aggregating $97.78.

The jury fixed the penalty at "one year in the penitentiary." After verdict and discharged the jury it was said by Circuit Attorney McDaniel that an "impossible verdict" had been returned, as a statute says that on conviction of a felony no one can be sent to the penitentiary for less than two years. The minimum penalty for embezzlement is two years. The Circuit Attorney said it might be permissible for the judge to change the penalty to one year in jail, but he could not be sure of this until he had looked further into law.

Watched for Several Weeks.
It developed at Julin's trial that the evidence against him was gathered over a term of several weeks ending Nov. 10 last by about 30 inspectors and auditors employed by the Railway Audit and Inspection Co. of Philadelphia and that two of these inspectors usually known to railway men as "rapistors" had worked on car crews and had joined the local street car men's union.

The inspectors who got into the union appeared as witnesses against Julin. They are David Dempsey of 2809 Chippewa street, who has been working as a conductor on the Broadway line, and Gustav Diederich of 5411A Louisiana, a motorman on the Bellefontaine line. Both told of conversations with Julin in which, they said, he told of stealing fares.

Other inspectors testified that they watched Julin on many occasions and saw him take fares from passengers and put them in his pocket or his change clip instead of in the farebox. One inspector said he saw Julin take "25 or 30 nickels" on a single trip.

Special Prosecutor Employed.
The Circuit Attorney's office was not represented at the trial. The prosecution was conducted by Edward Walsh, an attorney especially employed by Receiver Wells.

Julin was defended by Blodgett Priest, son of H. S. Priest, former general counsel for the United Railways Co., who now represents stockholders of the company in the receivership proceedings.

The only defense advanced by Priest was that in each instance the inspector left the car before the trip was completed and had no means of knowing whether or not Julin finally put the fares in the box.

Blodgett Priest filed a motion for a new trial and in arrest of judgment, alleging that the Court lacked jurisdiction in that, if money was taken, it did not amount to $30 at any one time and was, therefore, only petit larceny. He gave a $2000 bond for Julin, who was released pending arguments on the motion.

GEN. WOOD CHANGES HIS MIND

Candidate for President Will Continue "On Leave."

CHICAGO, April 15.—Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the Central Department, who arrived today from the East, announced that he would remain on leave for the present.

"My return to Chicago was on account of the railroad situation both in the East and the West," he said this morning. "It seemed to me that I should be within reach of my own headquarters in case any crisis occurred. The strike situation has improved rapidly in this department, and I shall remain on leave status for the present."

Miller went to the church altar and with his hands raised he prayed God to have mercy on his soul for the death of the little girl. He said he found relief in praying.

TWO LEPROS FOUND IN HEALING MISSION CROWD

New Orleans Health Authorities Isolate Afflicted Men, Order Influx Held Under $10,000 Bonds.

By the Associated Press.
NEW ORLEANS, April 15.—Two men afflicted with leprosy, found by city health officers in crowds awaiting "treatment" at the hands of "Brother Isaiah," a faith healer, today were arrested and taken to the leper home at Indian River.

The health authorities also took steps to prevent the congregating of afflicted persons in New Orleans, hundreds of whom have been attracted here by stories of the healing powers of "Brother Isaiah." Steamship and railroad companies were notified that prosecutions would result from transportation of more afflicted persons into the city and that shacks near the scene of the "healer's" operations were ordered torn down or burned.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, April 15.—An army of 175,000 men and 16,000 officers during the year beginning July 1 was passed today by the House in considering the military appropriation bill. No objection was made to the appropriations for pay, based on these figures, and no effort was made to provide for a larger force, although the army reorganization bill as passed by the House authorizes a maximum peace time army of approximately 300,000 men and 18,000 officers.

An appropriation of $27,500,000 for army aviation was adopted.

REED NOT TO ATTEND JOPLIN CONVENTION

Friends to Conduct Fight for Senator as Delegate Next Thursday.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, April 15.—Jacques G. L. Harvey, law partner of Senator Reed, announced last night that the Senator would not appear personally at the Democratic State Convention in Joplin next Thursday to conduct his fight for election as delegates at large to the national convention.

Instead, the Reed contest will be handled for Reed by Harvey, Fred W. Fleming, a Kansas City insurance man, and R. Emmett O'Malley, a Kansas City election commissioner. Harvey said that while the Senator would not personally demand recognition from the convention, his friends would demand it for him and that they believed the pressure would be sufficiently strong at Joplin to have Reed chosen without instructions on the league of nations. Harvey's views are not shared by many Democrats informed on state affairs, even Kansas City Democrats who are Reed's friends. They expect him to be scored in the Joplin convention resolutions. Reed will go into the convention with only 135 instructed votes, the 175 in Jackson County and seven in Knox County. There will be a total of 1571 votes in the convention, and of these approximately one-third are specifically instructed against Reed, and a large number of others are instructed against the election of any man who is not in sympathy with the Democratic national administration.

At the Jackson County convention an "outlaw" gathering yesterday at Independence the delegation of 175 was instructed to vote as a unit for Reed for delegate-at-large. There was no anti-Reed sentiment expressed in the convention, which was in control of Harvey, Fleming, O'Malley and others of Reed's intimate friends. It appeared that aside from these friends there was no very active sentiment for him. The spirit of the convention was more that Reed being a Jackson County man was entitled to the tribute of an instructed delegation from his home county, and that the home folks would stay with him as long as his name was before the convention. From remarks by his intimate friends it appears probable that his name will not be withdrawn and that it will remain before the convention for a final vote.

The action of the Jackson County convention yesterday marks the defeat of efforts of Chairman Neale of the State Committee and others to induce friends of Reed to keep his name out of the convention and thus prevent a fight which is threatening party harmony and which they fear will seriously injure the chances of Democratic victory in Missouri at the November election.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES" COLUMN EDITOR DIES

Donald Padman Was Known for Diligence in Obtaining Information for Readers.

Donald Padman, 72 years old, for years a member of the Post-Dispatch staff, and during the greater part of that time in charge of the "Answers to Queries" column, died last night in the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, where he had been a patient since last October, following a paralytic stroke in August. The funeral will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Wagoner chapel, 5621 Olive street.

Padman's newspaper career began in Nashville, Tenn., at the end of the Civil War. He had gone from his home in Michigan, as a boy of 16, to enlist in the army, but being small for his age, had been accepted only for clerical service with a Quartermaster. He remained in the South, and went to work for the Nashville Banner, of which Henry Watterson was then editor. Watterson later took him to Louisville, to work on the Courier-Journal, and Padman came to the Post-Dispatch in 1892. His work on the Courier-Journal had been chiefly as a writer of brief editorial paragraphs, and he did this work for the Post-Dispatch, but took up the "Answers" column as an incidental task. It grew so as to take his entire time.

Diligent in Obtaining Answers. Padman's diligence in obtaining the information sought by Post-Dispatch readers, and the aptness, brevity and keenness of his replies, made the "Answers" column widely read, and caused it to be copied by other newspapers. Many persons formed the habit of reading this column. Padman ran the column on the assumption that it was generally read, and when some question would come in which had been answered several times before, he would sometimes protest, in the interest of the majority of his readers, who he believed, would grow tired of seeing repetitions. Sometimes these stale queries were signed "Constant Reader," and Padman would ask, "Why does 'Constant Reader' never read?" When the "Answers" column first grew to proportions which required one man's time, the telephone was not so much used as it is now. Pad-man let no grass grow under his feet in his search for information, and he built up a staff of deputy answerers in public offices and learned professions. The bulk of his answers he dug out from the Public Library or from the office library, in which he built up a special reference department, indexed for his own use. He would do anything in his power to get an answer, and when he found the task impossible, he would write a reply saying so plainly. In such cases, the information, or a tip leading to it, would sometimes be sent in by a reader.

Student of Spiritualism. Although he made few acquaintances in a general way, Padman became known to students of Spiritualism and psychic phenomena. He was an earnest investigator in these lines and the question of communication with the dead, now being considered for the first time by many, was a life study with him. He sometimes said that he did not desire a future life for himself, having suffered keen disappointments in this life, but he believed it his duty to learn what could be learned of the occult world. His first experiments with the ouija board and automatic writing elated him. Later he said he had become convinced that the ouija board was an instrument of mischievous, lying intelligence.

He was an advocate of incineration, as a means of disposing of the human body after death, and he gave directions to his nearest friends to see that his body was cremated. Padman was twice married. His first wife was formerly Mrs. Mary Stone, a widow, and after her death he married Mrs. Florence Dennis Robinson, a leader in Spiritualistic circles. She died two years ago, leaving two children by a former marriage. Two sisters survive him, one living in Michigan and one in Colorado.

When Henry Watterson heard recently, at his winter home in Miami, Fla., of Padman's illness, he wrote, "There was never such another man as Padman. He came to me in Nashville in 1865, as a boy, and I chock-full of newspaper genius, and have loved him ever since. He was his oddities would fill a book."

MISS MARIE GRONE HAS CHURCH WEDDING

Married to Malcolm McMenamy
—Honeymoon Trip in the West.

THE marriage of Miss Marie Grone, daughter of Mrs. Adelaide Grone of 3723 West Pine boulevard, and Malcolm McMenamy was solemnized at 11 o'clock this morning at St. Francis Xavier's Church. A reception and wedding breakfast followed at the home of the bride's mother. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Stella Grone, as maid of honor, and another sister, Mrs. George Gessler, as matron of honor. Misses Marion Thibault, Ursula Griesedieck and Adelaide Bohn were bridesmaids. They all wore frocks of pale pink tulle, trimmed with bodices and aprons of cream lace and carried colonial bouquets of sweet peas and blue delphinium. Their hats were of brown tulle, with the exception of the maid of honor, who wore a cream lace hat. Joseph Whyte served Mr. McMenamy as best man and the groomsmen and ushers included Andrew Moore, George Gessler and Ralph Thomas. The bride's gown was of cream satin with a bodice of duchess lace, veiled in tulle, embroidered in seed pearls. A court train of satin faced in silver cloth fell from one shoulder and was caught to the waist at the opposite side. Her veil was held with a tiny wreath of orange blossoms and

Mr. McMenamy is the son of John McMenamy of 5447 Cabanne avenue. The young couple have departed for the West on a wedding trip and will be at home after May 15 at 616 Waterman avenue.

Social Items

Cards have just been received in St. Louis announcing the marriage of Lieut. Charles Campbell Brooks and Miss Margery Howard, at the American embassy in Paris March 17. Miss Howard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward O. Howard of Salt Lake City. She was attended by her mother. Lieut. Brooks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Brooks of Little Rock, Ark., formerly of St. Louis. He graduated from Soldan High and the University of Illinois and entered the regular army after attending the first officers' training camp at Camp Funston. The Legacy of Ebenezer Chance

By

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

THE young man closed the wine list which he had been studying and appeared to consider the matter favorably.

"Will it run to pop?" he asked.

Mr. Honeywood appeared troubled. Light suddenly, however, broke in upon him.

"Champagne?" he exclaimed. "By all means! Do me the kindness to order a bottle. I know your English taste is good. I myself am not acquainted with the best vintages."

The young man graciously consented, and ordered "Pommery 1904," which matter being settled, he proceeded to engage his host in sprightly conversation.

"American, what?" he inquired.

"I am from Okehamstead, in Massachusetts," was the genial reply. "My name is Horace P. Mendel Honeywood and I am in the insurance business."

"Harold Underwood here," the young man continued. "I am entitled to a lawyer. No end of a what, what?"

"I have always understood that the study of the law in its initial stages is somewhat strenuous," Mr. Honeywood remarked sympathetically.

"Sickening grind! . . . See those two old janitors over at the corner table by the door?" Mr. Honeywood glanced in the direction indicated.

"Two middle-aged gentlemen, with somewhat fresh complexions? Yes, I see them."

"My uncle. Simply rolling in it. Fifty thou a year each!"

"Dollars?"

"Pounds," the young man declared. "Both bachelors, both absolutely struggling to get rid of the coat."

Mr. Mendel Honeywood coughed. "I congratulate you," he said.

"Not much good to me," Harold grumbled. "They stumped up for my education all right, and I can touch them for a bit now and then, but they've got what they call principles about me. They'll buy me a partnership all right, in a firm of lawyers as soon as I have passed my final, but until then they've caged off the bird."

Mr. Honeywood was looking across the room in meditative fashion.

"They seem pleasant and kindly gentlemen," he observed. "Are they in a general way close with their money?"

"Falling over one another to spend it," was the somewhat wistful reply. "Got some idea it's their duty to spend half their income."

"It seems a reasonable idea."

"They can't do it," the young man confided, emptying his glass and nodding toward the wine steward. "Simply can't do it. The poor old dears dabble in everything that's brought to them, but they can't even chuck it away. They've the devil's own luck. If a man thinks he's salted them for a bit, they come out on top before the deal's over. Their latest craze is for buying pictures. That ought to hit 'em up a bit."

"Are they bankers?"

"Tea and rubber plantations—millions of acres of them."

Mr. Honeywood sighed. Through his gold-rimmed spectacles his eyes seemed to be worshipping the two figures in the distance.

"I should much esteem the privilege of meeting your uncles, Mr. Underwood," he said humbly.

"What's that? Eh?" the young man asked.

"I should greatly esteem the privilege of shaking hands with English merchant princes of such standing," Mr. Honeywood declared.

Harold stared for a moment at his insignificant looking little companion, and smiled.

"Insurance business, eh?"

"I should not presume to address your uncles upon that subject," Mr. Honeywood expostulated in a shocked tone. "Besides, I am on a vacation."

"You shall know the old boys if it gives you any pleasure," Harold promised. "Drink up your wine and we'll go and take our coffee with them."

Mr. Honeywood drank a brimming glass of champagne without flinching, signed his bill, laid down his tip like a man, and followed his young companion down the room. Harold's introduction was characteristic.

"Here's Cousin Johnathan at his rabidest; wants to shake hands," he announced. "Mr. Mendel Honeywood of Okehamstead, in the State of Massachusetts—absolutely his first appearance in England. Mr. Stephen Underwood, Mr. George Henry Underwood. What-ho!"

Mr. Honeywood was almost eagerly deferential. The young man's uncles greeted him with their usual calm and unruffled courtesy.

"You will do us the favor of taking your coffee with us, sir," Stephen suggested.

"Two chairs, waiter," George Henry directed.

"Nothing doing with yours truly," Harold declared. "I've got a read on with old Swivels down at Lincoln's Inn. By-by, everybody!"

"A most amiable young gentleman," Mr. Honeywood murmured as he gazed at Harold's disappearing figure.

"Is your acquaintance with our nephew of long standing?" Stephen asked, as he superintended the filling of his guest's glass with the finest brandy.

"I only met him this evening," Mr. Honeywood acknowledged. "In fact, I am a stranger in England. I arrived here on my first visit this afternoon."

"A holiday trip, I presume?" George Henry inquired courteously.

"Not altogether," Mr. Honeywood replied a little dubiously. "This trip across was urged upon me by my wife and all my friends, for a definite purpose. Now that I have arrived, however, I still feel in great difficulty. Having been privileged to make your acquaintance, gentlemen, I wonder if I might venture to ask you for a word of advice?"

The little man's manner was so nervous and appreciating that both Stephen and George Henry endeavored to adopt as encouraging an attitude as possible. Mr. Honeywood slipped his brandy and sat a little further in his chair.

"Your nephew," he began, "when he pointed you out to me, remarked that you were fond of pictures."

"We are certainly very fond of oil paintings," Stephen admitted.

"Quite a hobby with my brother," George Henry murmured.

"I am myself," Mr. Honeywood confessed, "utterly and entirely ignorant of all branches of art. You have perhaps heard, gentlemen, of Mr. Ebenezer Chance, the great American railway millionaire?"

"The name seems familiar," Stephen conceded.

"Mr. Ebenezer Chance," his guest continued, "was a client of our company; the company in which I hold a very humble salaried position. It fell to my lot to attend to his business, and I was very frequently brought into contact with him. He always expressed himself in very kindly terms as to my efforts. Some years ago he built a magnificent mansion on the shores of the lake at Okehamstead, near where I have a very modest dwelling. He was exceedingly kind to me, and used often to invite me to wander over his gardens and his magnificent picture gallery. Unfortunately, he became involved in the great railroad crisis of last year, and before we could realize it he was a ruined man. On the night the news came I happened to be wandering in his picture gallery and found him standing there with folded arms.

"Mendel," he said to me—he was very condescending, and used often to call me by my first name—"I am ruined!"

"I am a sensitive man, gentlemen, and I am afraid that I wept a few tears. He patted me kindly on the back, and, going up to one of the pictures which I had often admired, he cut it out of its frame with his pocket knife, rolled it up and handed it to me.

"That'll do you more good than my creditors, Mendel," he said. "Be off with it as soon as you can, and when you try to sell it, sell it in Europe."

"The next morning, gentlemen, Ebenezer Chance was found dead in his bed."

"And the picture?" the brothers asked in unison.

"I told my wife the whole episode, naturally," Mr. Honeywood continued, "also, in confidence, certain of my friends. Their advice was unanimous. They told me to bring the canvas over here and dispose of it. That is the real reason of my visit to England, and it occurred to me, when your nephew happened to mention that you were fond of pictures, that I might trouble you so far as to ask you for the name and address of a reputable firm of dealers."

"We will give you a list with the utmost pleasure," Stephen declared. "But where is this picture. Would it be possible for us to examine it?"

"We should not, of course, take any advantage of you," George Henry put in hastily. "You need not sell it without referring the price to a dealer."

"Quite so," Stephen agreed. "We are, as it happens, Mr. Honeywood, in the act of forming a small collection, to which your picture, with its history, might form a pleasing addition."

Mr. Honeywood's manner was never self-possessed, but at the present moment he was almost painfully confused. The color streamed into his cheeks, almost to his temples. He looked down upon the tablecloth.

"Gentlemen," he faltered, "you shall see the picture, with pleasure. You shall see it before anyone. I only regret that it cannot be for a few days."

The brothers were a little puzzled. Mr. Honeywood broke in upon their hesitation. He lifted his head and spoke to them frankly.

"I shall tell you the truth, gentlemen," he decided. "After all, I have nothing to be ashamed of, except a certain amount of folly entirely due to inexperience. I am accustomed on every Saturday evening, and occasionally on wet Saturday afternoons, to play auction bridge with three friends of mine at the Okehamstead Golf Club, and I am considered by them and by wife a very fair player. I found the time hang a little on the steamer, and one evening I was invited by three gentlemen to join them in a rubber of bridge. I was very grateful for their notice, but I ventured to ask what points they proposed playing. The reply was a dollar. I took this to mean a dollar a hundred, and although at home I have never played for more than 25 cents a hundred, the idea of a little companionship and sociability was so pleasing to me that I sat down to play. I lost the first rubber—500 points—and on tendering my $25, I found to my horror that these men, who were very wealthy, were playing dollar points, not a dollar a hundred, and that my indebtedness to them was exactly the amount of my letter of credit—namely, $500."

"Surely," Stephen asked, "they were willing to accept your explanation?"

"They were, I think, exceedingly hard upon me," Mr. Honeywood replied sadly. "They sent me for the purse and I had to pay. To get down here I was obliged to leave a portion of my luggage, including the picture, in pawn at Liverpool."

"Most unheard of conduct!" George Henry declared. "The steamship company should have been written to."

"Outrageous!" Stephen concurred.

"It was rather a severe lesson," Mr. Honeywood sighed. "Of course, I had been fully warned not to join in any gambling game on the steamer, but a rubber of bridge with gentlemen of standing naturally did not seem dangerous. However, I have cabled home for funds, which I am sure my wife will send me in the course of a few days, and the moment my picture is released I shall show it to you gentlemen."

Stephen glanced at his brother and met mute assent in his face.

"Might I inquire," he asked, "for what sum you left your luggage—or?"

"Ten pounds," Mr. Mendel Honeywood confessed.

Stephen produced his pocketbook.

"Let us be your bankers for the moment," he begged. "You can send this money off tonight, and come and see us with the picture on Thursday."

Mr. Honeywood blinked, took off his spectacles and rubbed them. Then he shook hands solemnly with both Stephen and George Henry and pocketed the two five-pound notes. He seemed at the moment incapable of speech.

"You will find us in suite 63," Stephen told him. "Pray do not exaggerate the importance of this little affair."

Mr. Honeywood rose to his feet. Once again he looked very much like a small boy masquerading in his father's spectacles.

"It is not the amount," he said gently. "It is your trust and your kindness. You will excuse me? I go to write my letter."

He made his way through the crowded room. George Henry and Stephen exchanged sympathetic glances.

"America, too, has its simpletons," the latter remarked.

"A kindly little person in his proper sphere," George Henry acquiesced.

To be continued tomorrow and concluded Saturday.

New French Weaves for Woolen Frocks Making Saving Possible In Need of Little Trimming

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.
PARIS, April 1.—
AMONG the woolen materials used this season, some give the impression of being embrodered, but this effect is obtained by the weaving. Serges, rubanna gansa and gansella are of that type. These materials need very little trimming and that will, of course, be greatly appreciated, since the prices of raw materials and hand labor are so high. A wonderful collection of printed foulard is also out, making pretty light afternoon frocks.

Furniture Polish

The greatest concern to a Parisian when she has a new dress made, is in the quality of the material. She does not believe in good work on cheap stuff and thinks that it is a waste of time because the effect is never the same no matter how smart the style is. Are not the simplest things the loveliest?

The fight is still on between the full dress to which taffeta is giving its charm, and the dress outlining the figure without having the tightness of the robe-chemise. The crinoline of the past winter, so amusing for certain ball dresses, is gradually vanishing upon the draped skirts and slightly tight bodices which characterize "la mode nouvelle."

Evening frocks continue to be very low-necked and without sleeves. Though one sees less opening down to the waist the back remains largely uncovered and the arms entirely bare with a simple shoulder strap which pretends to hold the bodice. Many of them have narrow trains in square shape or ending in a point. These trains can be lifted and fixed on to the waist for dancing.

A great number of couturiers have adopted the Second Empire decollete well showing the shoulders and with just a wee bit of sleeve. These frocks are generally made of taffeta in light shades. A little short cape made of the same material completes this charming little ingenious frock.

One sees with delight lace reappearing on many frocks, bringing with it that trifle of lingerie, collar, cuffs and chemise that gives a fresh and neat look to the little woolen frocks.

The sketch shown here is a little taffeta evening dress created by Jenny. The embroidery are of steel beads and a "camme" belt. The back is perfectly straight.

Blacky the Crow Has Hard Work to Believe His Eyes

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Who makes the best use of his eyes. Will seldom lack for a surprise.

THAT is because surprising things are happening all the time for those who have eyes to see them. Now, there are few sharper eyes than those of Blacky the Crow. There is little that goes on in the Green Forest or on the Green Meadows that escapes Blacky the Crow. His eyes are sharp and he knows how to use them. Through them he has learned many things, and one is just what a gun looks like. If he sees a man with a hoe on his shoulder Blacky will fly right over him. But if that man has a gun Blacky takes care to go "way-round."

In this particular morning Blacky was lazily winging his way over the Green Meadows with nothing in particular to do. As usual, he was using his sharp eyes to see all that was going on below. He saw Farmer Brown's boy come out of the Long Lane, but he wasn't particularly interested in Farmer Brown's boy until he suddenly stopped.

"He has found something over there in the grass," thought Blacky. "I wonder what it is?"

He changed his course so as to pass near enough to see. Presently, he saw something black and white. He knew instantly that it was Jimmy Skunk. Then, his eyes being sharp, he saw that there was something odd about the way Jimmy was acting. A minute later he saw clearly what the trouble was. Jimmy was caught in a trap.

"So that's it," muttered Blacky. "Too bad! Too bad! Jimmy isn't a bad fellow and I'm sorry to see him in such trouble. I guess this means the end of Jimmy Skunk. Probably Farmer Brown's boy set that trap and now he will kill Jimmy. Too bad! Too bad!"

Blacky flew to a little tree, from the top of which he could see all that might happen. All the time he kept muttering, "Too bad! Too bad!" He saw Jimmy Skunk face Farmer Brown's boy and put up his danger signal, which he does, you know, by raising his big tail high above his back. Then Blacky discovered a surprising thing. Farmer Brown's boy had no gun! He hadn't even a stick! Blacky blinked. "If he goes much nearer he'll wish he hadn't," muttered Blacky. "I hope he will. It will serve him right. He has pretended to be a friend of us little people, but you can't trust these men creatures. You can't trust one of them. Hello! What's he doing that for?"

Farmer Brown's boy had taken off his coat. Then he began to talk to Jimmy Skunk. Blacky could hear

GENERAL CURB LIST

SHOWS FIRM TONE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, April 15.—Naturally the removal of Stutz Motor from the New York Stock Exchange at the request of the company's chairman, Alvan A. Ryan, after the exchange suspended trading in it, went on sale on the curb today and brought higher prices than ever. The first sales were at 700 and 710 and as high as 710 was asked. The price when the exchange stopped trading was 701 and auction prices since then had been 700 to 701.

Ryan, whose resignation from the exchange, tendered with accusations that members of the Board of Governors were short in Stutz when trading was stopped in it, had not been accepted, today announced himself in favor of incorporation of the exchange.

In the stock market, active trading was reported in Oklahoma and Texas Petroleum which made its first appearance on the curb this morning. British-American, Tobacco, West, although there was also a good demand from local commission houses. Simms Petroleum was fairly steady, although it declined in the afternoon trading from 26 1/2 to 26. General Asphalt showed a firm tone ranging from 89 1/2 to 100. There was active trading in Granite Oil following the report of experts who have returned from Columbia, after making an independent examination of the property, which is adjacent to holdings of the Guffe-Gillespie Oil Co. Sinclair Oil and Tropical Oil. The latter is on a fairly large scale at 21 1/2 to 21 3/4. There also was active trading in the stock being influenced by further reports on the company's working in full capacity at all its plants, with the output sold at the extent of the production.

The following is a list of the day's highest and lowest prices for the most active stocks dealt in on the curb today:

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By James J. Montague.

Congress has this year discontinued its ancient practice of garden seed distribution.

When spring came smiling through the land
And set the little brooks to singing,
When every breeze was soft and bland
And homeward all the birds were winging,
When blossoms burgeoned on the mead
And green the buds were, on the lattice,
I used to watch to see the seed
My Congressman dispatched me—gratias.

And ah! I used to plant them, too,
I set them out on every May-day;
For I was young—the skies were blue,
And spring and hope were in their hey-day.
I watered them with tender care;
The richest, blackest loam I brought 'em,
And all the time that I could spare,
I gave to them from May till autumn.

But though the rains wept o'er their beds,
Though sunbeams warmed their resting places,
No sprouts ever raised their tiny heads,
No plantlets showed their tiny faces.
But after years I came to know
That neither rain nor sun nor diet
Nor care nor toil could make them grow,
In fact, that wouldn't even try it.

And yet, in springtime, when they came,
Aside I reverently laid them,
And always thrilled to see my name
Upon the packet that conveyed them.
It mattered little if they grew,
That wasn't in the least essential;
But when they came the neighbors knew
That I was rather influential.

MORE SUPPLY THAN DEMAND.
The only people who don't have any trouble getting help are the proprietors of bonded warehouses.

MERELY A SUGGESTION.
We might respond to the request of the Allies that we take more interest in them if we could get more interest out of them.

Professional Loss.
His friend noticed that the dentist was looking blue and inquired, "What's the matter, Joe?" "Why, I've had an ulcerated tooth and yesterday it got so bad I had to pull it myself." "Oh, yes?" "Then why this frown?" "Why this frown? Because, you idiot, I once got $400 for treating a tooth like that."—Boston Transcript.

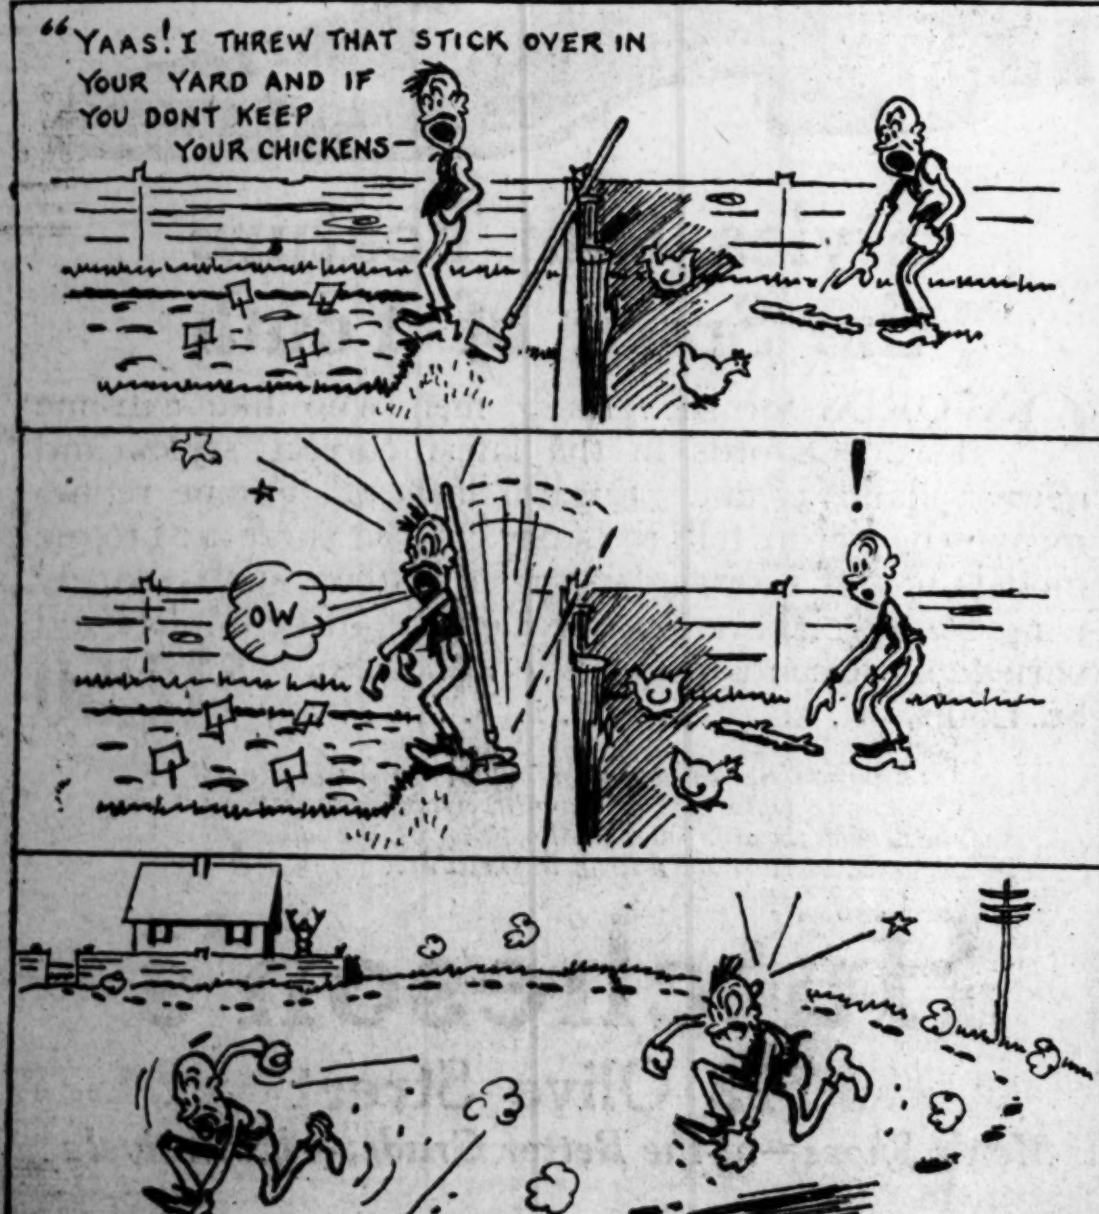

Something Missing.
A city youngster was paying his first visit to his uncle's farm. Among the animals on the place was a rather small colt. As the boy stood gazing at the little creature his uncle said: "Well, what do you think of him, Johnny?" "Why—why, he's all right," said Johnny; "but where's his rockers?"—Boston Transcript.

Question.
"They say now that there must be a law passed for the arrest of parlor bolsheviks." "Who's to do the arresting—the kitchen police?"—Wichita Eagle.

Eugenics.
"What do you think of eugenics, anyway?" asked Smith. "Well," replied Jones. "I am six feet tall, weigh 200 pounds and have never been arrested. And my parents were never registered in a herd book."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Horse Sense.
"How did Blank lose the fingers of his right hand?" "Put them in the horse's mouth to see how many teeth he had." "And then what happened?" "The horse closed his mouth to see how many fingers Blank had."—London Tit-Bits.

Something Needed.

The Real Thing.
"What's the excitement here?" "A movie actress is registering indignation." "But where's the camera man?" "There isn't any camera man. She's having words with a genuine policeman."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

He Should Worry.
Mrs. Flatts: What was it I told you a little while ago, John? Mr. Flatts: I don't know, dear; I wasn't listening. "Now isn't that provoking? And I just can't think what it was to repeat it!"—Yonkers Statesman.
